About the Course

It is all about exploring the world around us, what makes us tick as individuals and groups, as well as the different ways our lives can evolve. This subject allows students to examine and better understand themselves, as well as their own society and culture, and that of others through different avenues including film, media, personal experience, and individual research. What You Will Do

We cover topics ranging from Personal and Social Identity, Social and Cultural Continuity and Change, Social Inclusion and Exclusion, and Pop Culture. We do this through discussions, film and text studies, and primary research. You are also required to complete a major work, the PIP, in this course. This is a chance for you to explore a topic you are passionate about.

Future Opportunities

Society and Culture is great prep for University and good for students thinking about moving into Social work, Education, Sociology, Journalism and Psychology.
